was directed to several objects of great importance to the interests of my Allies, and to the security of my dominions.

I regret, that of these objects a part only has been accomplished.

I have not judged it to be necessary to direct any Military Inquiry into the conduct of my Commanders by Sea or Land in this conjoint Service.

It will be for my Parliament, in their wisdom, to ask for such Information, or to take such measures upon this subject as they shall judge most conducive to the public good.

PUBLIC OCCURRENCES.

BRITISH.

A shocking accident happened in Duke-street, Oxford-street, on Monday evening, to the child of Mrs. Fawell. She had gone down from her apartments in the absence of her servant, to answer a knock at the door, leaving her only child, a fine boy about three years old, in the rooms. On returning again she was alarmed by her sons shrieks, and found the child so much burnt, that he expired soon afterwards. He had taken a news-paper off the table and lighted it by the fire, which was the cause of the catastrophe.

Wednesday, Dec. 20, at three o'clock in the afternoon died, at his house in St. Paul's Church-yard, Mr. Joseph Johnson, bookseller, being more than 70 years of age. He was an ornament to the profession in which he was engaged, and would have been an ornament to any profession. He was a man of a generous, candid and liberal mind; he delighted in doing good; the worthy and necessitous had reason to bless the warmth of his heart, and will long continue to regret his loss. He was on all occasions ready to apply his time and his thoughts for the benefit of others; and for his integrity and clearness of his views, was the perpetual resort of all his connections in seasons of difficulty and embarrassment. His understanding was of the best and soundest nature; and though he was the very reverse of every thing assuming and ostentatious, yet those who knew him best, and were most able to estimate his talents, will readily bear testimony, that they never heard him say a weak or foolish thing, or indeed any thing that would have discredited the lips of the wisest of his contemporaries. Accordingly his table was frequented through successive years by a succesion of persons of the greatest talents, learning and genius; and the writer of these lines can chearfully bear witness that all were delighted when he took his share in the conversation, and only regretted that the gentleness and modesty of his nature led him to do it so rarely. He was always found an advocate on the side of human nature and human virtues, recommending that line of conduct which springs from disinterestedness and a liberal feeling, and maintaining the practicability of such conduct.
